SHOOTING OF ROSENTHAL DESCRIBED TO NEW JURY AT THE TRIAL OF BECKER

Waiter Krause Tells of Seeing the Gunmen Fire at Gambler, and Police Witnesses Go Over the Old Ground.

Taking of testimony against Charles Becker, accused of the murder of Herman Rosenthal, was begun this afternoon before Justice Seabury in the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court.

Policeman J. J. Brady was the first witness called by Assistant District Attorney Delehanty, who took charge of the examination of witnesses. Before he began answering questions other witnesses were directed to leave the courtroom.

A young man who said his name was Sutton and that he was a clerk in the Court of Special Sessions caused considerable commotion during the testimony of Krause, the waiter, in the Becker trial this afternoon. Sutton from a seat in the rear of the courtroom announced in a loud voice—which was not heard, however, by the jury:

"That has been well coached by the District Attorney. He's working to make Whitman Governor, but he won't succeed. I know what I'm talking about and I'll tell what I know at the proper time."

Sutton was hustled outside and questioned by court officers. His language was reported to District Attorney Whitman, who said he would prefer charges against Sutton with the Justices of the Court of Special Sessions.

Brady was in Broadway near Forty-third street at 2 o'clock in the morning of June 15, 1912. He heard shots. He started for the sound of the shots and saw persons running east on Forty-third street.

Lieut. Edward J. Fry was the next witness. He heard the shots when at Seventh avenue and Forty-second street. He heard first one shot, then after an interval three more.

"I ran to Forty-third street," he said, "and saw the body of a man lying under the electric lights of the Hotel Metropole. There was a taxi-cab starting east. In it was Patrolman File, now Sergeant. He was bareheaded and had a revolver in his hand."

Sergeant File, who was on vacation when he dropped into the Metropole just before Rosenthal was killed, was the third witness.

File saw Rosenthal enter the restaurant. He saw Bridgie Webber come in and look about. Rosenthal was just in front of him.

"I saw Rosenthal," said File, "rise with some papers in his hand and join a group at another table. I didn't see him go back. The next thing I heard was the sound of a shot. I ran out with my revolver in my hand. I saw a car going east. I saw two men getting into it."

Q. Indicate to the jury in what succession the shots sounded. A. Bing! bing! bing! bing!

Q. Did you see who it was? A. No. Q. Did you see Bridgie Webber after the shooting? A. Yes; on the steps of the Cadillac Hotel.

Q. How long after the shooting? A. About twenty-five minutes.

Dr. Otto H. Schultz, Coroner's Physician, told of the examination of Rosenthal's body at the Morgue.

"The defense is not disputing the death of Rosenthal from the causes stated," said counsel for the defense.

Louis Krause, a waiter who testified at the first trial, again told the story of coming to Manhattan from Coney Island. He arrived at Times Square station at a little before 2 o'clock.

Q. Did you notice anything in Forty-third street? A. Yes, I saw some men and went over to see what was going on there.

Q. What did you see next? A. A man came out of the Metropole and did this. (The witness raised his right finger like a man calling a cab or a messenger.)

Q. What did you next see? A. A man whom I afterward knew as Rosenthal. Four men with revolvers in their hands began to shoot him. Q. Did you see anybody about the body of Rosenthal besides the four who shot at him? A. Yes, Mr. Bridgie Webber.

Q. Did he have a revolver in his hand or shoot? A. No. Q. Did you see anybody else whose names were afterward known to you? A. Whitey Lewis and Jack Sullivan.

Q. What did Sullivan do? A. He raised the body of Rosenthal and looked at the face. Q. What did he do then? A. He smiled.

Later Krause said he identified "Gyp the Blood" and "Lefty Louie" as others he had seen at the time of the killing of Rosenthal.

Two new jurors, to take the place of those excused on Saturday, were chosen at the morning session and then District Attorney Whitman made his opening address, outlining the case as he expects to develop it later in the testimony. He renewed the charge that Becker had entered into a conspiracy to cause the murder of Rosenthal in order to stop the threatened revelation as to graft and gambling.

While Mr. Whitman was speaking it became known that John Stanisch, a waiter, who swore in the first trial that he witnessed the shooting of Rosenthal, was to have been one of the first witnesses for the prosecution in this trial. But Stanisch has not been found, although detectives have been looking for him ever since the Court of Appeals decision favoring Becker. There is no clue in the District Attorney's office to his whereabouts.

At the opening of court at the morning session Mr. Stanton renewed his fight on District Attorney Whitman and what are described as his unfair methods. Motions were made to declare this proceeding a mistrial. Mr. Stanton stated his motions in the Justice's chambers and they were promptly denied.

The motions were based not alone on the accidental premature publication on Saturday of District Attorney Whitman's opening address to the jury, but also on publication in the morning newspapers to-day outlining

WHITMAN TO DEMAND SIEGEL BOND FORFEIT

Takes Action When He Hears That Merchant Asked About Extradition Treaties.

District Attorney Whitman served notice on John Stanisch late this afternoon that he would move, before Justice Seabury, after the adjournment for the day of the Becker trial, that the bond of Henry Siegel, who is on his way to Europe, although the subject of fourteen indictments, be forfeited.

The motion was based on affidavits in the possession of the District Attorney. The nature of these affidavits was disclosed earlier in the way, when Assistant District Attorney Arthur Train, in opposing before Justice Seabury an application for a change of venue, declared that Siegel, before sailing, sent an agent to the Public Library to inquire about countries with which the United States had no extradition treaties.

LIEUT. MAIGNE, U. S. N., ARRESTED AT VERA CRUZ

On Retired List, but Had Been Forbidden to Enter Enemy's Lines as a Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, May 11.—First Lieutenant Charles M. Maigne, U. S. A., retired, who went through the Mexican lines at Vera Cruz in the capacity of correspondent for a Washington newspaper, was arrested to-day upon returning to Vera Cruz.

Advice of his arrest reached the War Department from Gen. Funston. Maigne's arrest was ordered from Washington on the ground that it would be difficult satisfactorily to explain the presence of an American officer within the lines of those who confront the right of the United States on Mexican soil.

Orders had previously gone out for Maigne to cease writing newspaper stories, and when Gen. Funston reported that the retired officer had passed through the Mexican Federal lines the order for his arrest followed.

Officials here think that, although Lieut. Maigne is retired, it would be difficult to satisfy the Mexican Federal commander that the officer's presence within the enemy's lines was in his purely civil capacity as a newspaper correspondent.

"MEN SHOULD BE PROUD TO DIE SERVING MANKIND," SAYS PRESIDENT WILSON.

President Declares America Does Not Seek to Fight Mexico, But to Serve the Mexican People—Lauds Hero Dead.

President Wilson, standing before the 10,000 persons gathered in the Navy Yard, paid his tribute to the men who died in Mexico "to serve mankind."

"The President's speech was as follows: 'Mr. Secretary: I know that the feelings which characterize all who stand about me, and the whole nation at this hour, are not feelings which can be suitably expressed in terms of attempted oratory or eloquence. They are things too deep for ordinary speech. For my own part, I have a singular mixture of feelings.

"The feeling that is uppermost is one of profound grief that these lads should have had to go to their death, and yet there is mixed with that grief a profound pride that they should have gone as they did, and, if I may say it out of my heart, a touch of envy of those who were permitted so quietly, so nobly, to do their duty.

"Have you thought of it, men, there is the roster of the navy, the list of the men, officers and enlisted men and marines, and suddenly there disappear nineteen stars out of the list—men who have suddenly gone into a firmament of memory, where we shall always see their names shine; not because they called upon us to admire them, but because they served us, without asking any questions, and in the performance of a duty which is laid upon us as well as upon them.

"Duty is not an uncommon thing, gentlemen. Men are performing it in the ordinary walks of life all around us all the time.
